

English Amateur Dancesport Association leaves British Dance Council

We have to report that at a meeting of the Directors of EADA and at a subsequent Council meeting, it was unanimously agreed that EADA would withdraw from the British Dance Council.

Recent actions of the BDC are not in the interests of our members and in our opinion have been implemented without due process.

EADA will continue to represent and support all our members both domestically and internationally, as the English member of the International DanceSport Federation.

We shall, however, request that the IDSF accept that in future we are known as Dancesport England.
